All Saints' Church

5 There was a Saxon church standing here before the Norman Conquest (1066). The Chancel arch (the arch at the altar end) is the oldest part dating back to circa 1100. The church was in decay around 1580 and received much new woodwork in the following century. The arch to the tower, long walled up for use as a dovecot, was reopened about 1855 and a new roof was put on.

6 Also detail of carving by the door.
